

Women's health study

Stanford University's Gynecology Department is recruiting participants for a study investigating specific biomarkers in menstrual blood.

The study involves participation in 2 sessions of about 30 minutes each.

Participants will be paid 50 USD at the end of 2nd session and be entered into a random drawing to win two tickets for a movie theatre.

First session is a meeting with our medical investigator who will explain the process and ask some general health questions. The second session is upon delivery of a menstrual blood sample into a menstrual cup as well as a blood draw for comparison at the Stanford blood lab.

To participate for the general study, you must (1) be 18-45 years of age, (2) be English-speaking, (3) be in general good health and (4) be without the use of contraceptives such as birth control pills or IUD.
Participant's rights questions, contact 1-866-680-2906.

If you have any further questions, please email us at naseri@stanford.edu

familyplanningresearch
@stanford.edu

familyplanningresearch
@stanford.edu